Jessica attended South Dakota State University for my bachelor's and master's degrees.

During undergrad, she worked for the National Park Service on the Niobrara and Missouri Rivers and also completed a research project comparing young common carp diets to native fish diets.

Her master's project was focused on the reproduction of bighead and silver carp (Asian carp) in eastern South Dakota rivers.

Jessica worked as the Aquatic Nuisance Species Program Coordinator for Kansas for three years prior to starting as the ANS Coordinator for North Dakota in February 2016.
