Nancy has a family history that is firmly rooted in farming. Her family has been farming for at least seven generations, first in Norway and then in North Dakota after they immigrated to the United States. Both her parents and her husband's parents are original Minn-Dak Farmers Cooperative stockholders and have been growing sugar beets since 1974.

Nancy was born and raised on a farm in southeast North Dakota, where she was an active 4-H member. She graduated from North Dakota State College of Science in Wahpeton, ND, with a Business Administration degree. She and her husband Joe grow sugar beets, wheat, soybeans and corn on their farm. They farm near Wahpeton, ND and Breckenridge, MN. They have two adult children; a daughter who has remained involved with sugar beets by working for Minn-Dak Farmers Cooperative and has recently been named Extension Educator for two counties in Minnesota and a son who returned to the family farm and also raises show cattle.

In addition to farming with her husband, Nancy has been employed with the Minn-Dak Farmers Cooperative for 28 years and is currently serving as the Communication Specialist, where she works to bridge the information gap between the public, farmers, and cooperative employees. She is also a member of the Wilkin County Extension Committee, and both Nancy and her husband have been members of the Wilkin County Livestock Committee. She is also a member of the MN Agri Women and a member of the American Society of Sugar Beet Technologists.

Nancy's many travel destinations include several states, as well as Mexico, Aruba, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.
