Hans Kandel is a professor and the North Dakota State University Extension Agronomist for broadleaf crop production. He is based on the main Fargo campus. He received his PhD from NDSU.

Kandel has developed Extension programs for producers in Northwest Minnesota and ND that blend agronomy, crop, soil science, and economics. Kandel's Extension programs address the needs of producers growing traditional broadleaf crops (flax, sunflower, soybeans, canola, field peas, etc.). He also conducts applied research with broadleaf crops and tile drainage. Hans is affiliated with the Agronomy Society of America.
